Good morning.

Doesn't this fall under AMVIC, which we already pay for, in the code of conduct and in turn is already being policed according to customers concerns. Do we really need to add to our governments work load. Is this going to require the creation of yet another department to handle concerns and complaints. How is the existing system failing. Would it not be more efficient to address any short comings in the existing system than to create an altogether new process.

Just a thought.
