If the value of the vehicle exceeds the value of repairs completed, and the repaired parts fail, give the auto repair shop the opportunity to purchase the vehicle for the entire cost of the invoice.

If an automobile repair facility exceeds a certain threshold of verified and validated complaints to AMVIC against them, require a prudent reserve or bond that is in line with the average repair bill x a certain amount of invoices.

I appreciate you addressing this.

I worked at a tire shop when I was a teenager, I am in no way affiliated with the automotive industry other than as a consumer.
