If government is meant to serve in the best interests of the public, it is they who should have the ear of the government, not corporations, especially when the corporations motivation is for profit. That profit which they seek is at the expense of the public. Corporations have by definition been called persons, which is what people have become used to seeing themselves as. If this were true then corporations are placed on the same level as the people who government is meant to serve. This is totally untenable to those human beings who know they are not a person but rather a living human being, far superior to a lifeless entity known as a corporation. This is precisely why we have so many laws on the books that favor corporations to the detriment of the people. This is then compounded when they are given tax breaks, as well as handouts in billions of dollars which are provided by the hard working people who are trying to provide for their primary duty, their family.
